An extraordinary account of the life in the Colonies of New South Wales, South Australia and the Port Phillip District. The Author dines with the newly arrived Captain Lonsdale at Melbourne. Convinced that an overland route for cattle was needed between the Eastern State [Port Phillip district] and the newly formed South Australia he does just that along the Murray River and what would later become the Victorian State borders with 1200 hundred sheep and 300 hundred cattle, swimming rivers, and surviving a lightning strike that kills two bullocks within 4 yards of him. Until recent times, the NSW Government maintained Australia's largest bus fleet, and for six decades even operated the bulk of Sydney's commuter ferry services. Click here to Order

SCARCE.

Toowong; Takarakka Nowan Kas Publications; 2000.

Grahame Walsh's masterpiece, "Bradshaw Art of the Kimberley", a vast an unclassifiable book, part photographic essay, part speculative anthropology. When the book was published it marked the moment of Walsh's greatest difficulty as well as the first pinnacle of his public renown. Protest from Kimberley Aboriginal groups angered by his interpretation of the Bradshaw style redoubled; rock art experts resented his refusal to share his data or provide access to sites he knew. But the overwhelming detail collected in the book and the depth of his knowledge of the tradition made their own case. It became impossible to deny that Walsh, through his solitary efforts, had uncovered a vast, half-forgotten realm of indigenous art. Click here to Order
